Mr. Inderfurth said the package was exactly what he wanted and that it would be put to use to brief the members of the Subcommittee on Collection, Production, and Quality.

3. The three Committee Chairmen gave generalized briefings about their particular collection systems, programs, and committee activities. None of the Chairmen reported in any detail about the requirements mechanism due to the lack of time. The emphasis in each case was on the historical development of the Committee and on a description of typical operations. The SSCI staff members did not ask detailed questions. Mr. Inderfurth requested that each Committee Chairman provide him a copy of an organization and function chart of the various subcommittees, panels and working groups of the respective committee. During the HRC briefing, Mr. Inderfurth asked for the 1973 PFIAB study on the problems of collecting intelligence through human sources. He was informed by [ ] that that study was not the DCI's to release and that SSCI would have to go to the PFIAB for the document (MFR from [ ] IC-76-3270, dated 25 August 1976, subj: Senate Select Committee Staff Interview with Human Resources Committee Chairman).
